PRESIDENT POSITIVE!

Tells What He Wants in Meat Inspection Bill.

HIS OPINION IS GIVEN.

Believes Substitute for Beveridge Amendment is Wholly Inadequate.

THE COURT REVIEW PARAGRAPH

Washington, June 15th.—As a result of an importance conference held at the white house this afternoon, a change has taken place in the situation which may make for a solution of the difficulty in which the house committee on agriculture found itself after the president had indicated that the committees substitute for the Beveridge amendment was wholly inadequate and unsatisfactory. The participants in the conference, besides the president, were James B. Reynolds, who assisted in making the packing house inquiry for the president; Solicitor McCabe, of the department of agriculture, and Representative Adams, of Wisconsin, one of the republican members of the committee on agriculture, who signed the majority report on the meat inspection substitute thoroughly with Representative Adams, the president indicated just what he wanted written into the law.

Mr. Adams said he would be perfectly willing to accept the suggestions made by the president and would work to that end in the committee. The president told him frankly, as he told Chairman Wadsworth yesterday, that the substitute, as prepared by the majority of the house committee, was entirely unsatisfactory and to his mind, absolutely inadequate to meet the requirements of the situation. He objected particularly to the court review paragraph, which he thought ought to be eliminated.

The president said to Mr. Adams that he was not trying for any particular form of words in the proposed law, but he was after a substance that would be effective and adequate and proposed to get it if that were possible.

The amendments, the president suggested, were satisfactory to Representative Adams, who, at the conclusion of the conference, returned to the capitol to take up the matter with his colleagues.

Gov. Pattison of Ohio. Dies Suddenly

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 18.—John M. Pattison, Governor of Ohio, died Monday afternoon at his home in Milford, a suburb of this city, never having rallied from the effects of the inauguration ceremony of last winter, when he was sworn in as Chief Executive of the State after rising from a sick bed and took part in the ceremony from a specially made glass reviewing stand.

Governor Pattison's death was unexpected, for, until a few minutes before he showed no more serious symptoms than during the last few months. He passed what was for him a good night, and during the day the news had been encouraging, the hope being expressed that he might be able to resume his interrupted duties.

His death gives the administration of the State back to the Republicans, he having been chosen on the reform wave last autumn. He was the only Democrat elected. Lieutenant Governor Andrew L. Harris will be his successor.

WILL PENSION TEACHERS

Carnegie Foundation Retires Fifty and Pays Them $70,000 Yearly.

New York, June 12.—The Carnegie Foundation, organized in April last year by Andrew Carnegie to provide retirement pensions for teachers in the universities, colleges and technical schools of the United States, Canada and New Foundland, and to which Mr. Carnegie gave $10,000,000 in steel corporation bonds, has made its first selection of men to receive these allowances. About 50 professors and teachers will be retired at the end of the college year, the total amount to be distributed to them being approximately $70,000 a year. Among well-known men on the list are John Krom Rees, of Columbia; Henry M. Baird, of New York University; Hiram Corson, of Cornell; Charles A. Young and William A. Packard, of Princeton; Edward L. Morley, of Western Reserve; George Trumbull Ladd, of Yale; Henry P. Bowditch, of Harvard; Francis A. Marsh, of Lafayette; Dr. E. R. Merrill, formerly president of Ripon College, Wisconsin, and P. H. Chandler of Rhode.

EXCITING CAPTURE.

Boys Who Robbed Curtin Post Office Caught at Mill Hall.

Jerome Dale and Henry Gordon, two Bellefonte Youths, have been arrested for the robbery of the Roland Post Office at Morrison & Glenns store. Their capture was quite exciting and Thursday's Lock Haven Democrat gives the following particulars.

On opening the store this morning Mr. Glenn saw at once that there had been a robbery and his suspicions fell on a couple of characters whom he had noticed around during the previous day. When the first train for Lock Haven came along he told the conductor of his loss, giving to him a description of the men. When the trained pulled into Mill Hall the conductor informed the agent, George C. Snyder of the affair, giving him a description of the men. It was not long until he saw a couple of men answering this description come down the track and go up towards Mill Hall. He at once notified Landlord C. H. Long, of the Clinton house, telling him also that he believed that they were the men wanted. They soon came along, one of them going into Coffey's drug store. Mr. Snyder had also notified Constable C. A. Snyder of his suspicions and he and Long waited until the one joined his companion in the drug store and then went after them and found one of them talking over the Bell phone and the other standing idly by.

Without any further ceremony they went for the burglars, one of whom was a powerful big fellow who drew a revolver and had it not been for the prompt action of Constable Snyder in knocking the weapon out of his hand he would have killed the landlord.

After a desperate struggle, in which it required all their strength, the two men were securely handcuffed and given to understand that if any further attempt was made to do violence that they would be roughly handed.

A search for their clothing was then made and between $60 and $70 in small coin, a lot of stamped envelopes, postage stamps, several knives, three revolvers and plenty of cartridges were found.

They were then taken to the lock-up where a strict watch will be kept on them. Agent Snyder at once telephoned to Curtin of the capture and officers, and Mr. Glenn came to Mill Hall and identified the prisoners and took them to the Bellefonte jail.

The affair caused a great deal of excitement in Mill Hall and Landlord Long owes his life to Constable Snyder's prompt action.

Henry Gordon and Jerome Dale, the two young men implicated in the robbery of the Curtin Post office and store, were given a hearing Friday afternoon before Justice Keichline. The boys admitted their guilt and have turned over the bulk of their plunder. They were remanded back to jail for trial.

HEAVY RAINS CAUSE DAMAGE

Flood is Threatened in the Wyoming Valley

WILKESBARRE HIT HARD

As Were Different Other Places in the Vicinity—Three Churches Struck.

ALL THE STREAMS HAVE OVERFLOWED

Scranton, Pa., June 17th.—Heavy rains have fallen here almost continuously since yesterday at noon and a flood is threatened all along the valley. Severe thunder and lightning accompanied the rain. As yet no serious damage has been reported.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 17th.—A day of almost steady rain was followed this evening at 6 o'clock by a terrific thunder storm and lightening did considerable damage in this city and vicinity. A lightning bolt struck the steeple on the Parish Methodist Episcopal church and damaged the edifice to the extent of $1,400, and more than a dozen houses were damaged throughout the valley. The Nottingham breaker of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was struck at Plymouth and two holes torn in the roof. The big structure caught fire but the heavy downpour of rain that followed fortunately extinguished the flames.

The lightning played havoc with the telephone, telegraph and electric wires. A big generator of the Wilkes-Barre and Wyoming Valley Traction company was burned out and more than half the service had to be suspended. A cloudburst near Sugar Notch covered the tracks of that branch of the traction system with mud two feet deep for a distance of half a mile.

The wires on the Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton road were also burned out and the road was idle for several hours. More than 500 telephones in this city were burned out and fully that many more were put out of service in the surrounding towns.

All the small streams have overflowed and the Pennsylvania railroad's flyer, due here at 9 o'clock, is tied up by a landslide between this city and Nanticoke.

The Presbyterian church at Plains and the Lutheran church at Dorrans were both badly damaged by lightning.

In the Hazleton region lightning placed the Lehigh Traction company out of commission. The house of John Kuntz, at Beaverbrook, was struck and the bolt split Kuntz's right foot from toe to ankle.

Reports from the agricultural districts are to the effect that grain and other crops have been washed out and practically destroyed.

MATTERN FAMILY REUNION.

Celebration of 180th Anniversary of the Family in America.

The reunion of the Mattern family, celebrating the one hundred and eightieth anniversary of the family in America, will be held in Funk's grove, Warriorsmark, Thursday and Friday of this week, June 21 and 22. The first day, Thursday, will be the special day of reunion, picnic and exercises, when the observance of the anniversary will be formally celebrated. The second, Friday, is appointed for visits and continued reunion by friends coming from a distance.

The program for Thursday morning opening about 10 o'clock, will be as follows:

Meeting called to order by the President, Rev. John A. Mattern of Clearfield, Pa,
Music, Chorus
Opening prayer
Address of welcome by Prof. Louis W. Mattern, of Washington, D. C, Response by the President.
Memorial to those deceased since the last reunion.
Music, "America."
Reading of letters from friend.
Short talks.

Picnic dinner in the woods will be the order for the noon hour. At 2 30 in the afternoon a meeting will be held at which officers will be elected to arrange for the next reunion. Doubtless many of the picknickers will also remain for supper in the grove.

The Mattern family is one of the largest families in America and is identified with the first families of Virginia, having settled in Sweet Brier county during the occupation of Indians in the state. They are a very numerous family on the continent of Europe. With a history kept of the family for more than 400 years they are said to have had members of the family identified with Martin Luther in the days of the Reformation; and to have purchased their land directly from William Penn the founder of Pennsylvania; and to have representative members in the first of the Methodist Episcopal societies in this country and in Europe. They are a prolific and strong people, physically, mentally and morally.

All members and kindred of the family and their friends,—everybody, will be most cordially welcomed at the reunion The day is planned to be a pleasant picnic of congenial paper and the Mattern family has no desire to monopolize the pleasure of the day entirely to itself.

It is expected that special trains will be run on the Lewisburg & Tyrone railroad on Thursday, one leaving Tyrone at 7 a. m. and the other leaving here at 4.50 p. m. These trains will run through to Scotia, and returning will reach Tyrone at 9.40 a. m., and 8 p m. The regular trains leave Tyrone at 7.50 a. m. and 2.50 p. m.

KEAN GIVEN TWENTY YEARS

The Abductor of Little Freddie Muth Was Kept Going Fast.

HELD BY MAGISTRATE.

Grand Jury Finds True Bill, He Plead Guilty and was Promptly Sentenced.

NO JURY SWORN IN THE CASE

Philadelphia, June 14.—'Had I the disposition of this case I would summon 500 mothers here and turn you over to their tender mercies; but as the law fixes the penalty for crimes like yours, I can do nothing but commit you without bail for the action of the grand jury on the charge of "kidnapping."

These words were addressed by Magistrate Eisenbrown to John Joseph Kean, the abductor of "Freddie" Muth, the 7-year old son of Charles Muth, the Columbia avenue jeweler, who with his captive was discovered Monday after a six day search, in a vacant house in West Philadelphia.

Kean was committed to jail at once. A few minutes later the grand jury had returned an indictment against him. Kean was taken to the quarter sessions court, where, before Judge Sulzberger, he was given an immediate trial.

Kean requested to be allowed to make a statement. He said there were mitigating circumstances in connection with the kidnapping, but the judge told the prisoner he must either plead guilty or not guilty.

Kean then pleaded guilty. Three witnesses, the two special policemen who made the arrest and the proprietor of the eating house who had seen Kean and the lad together, then gave their testimony before the judge. No jury was chosen. The prisoner was sentenced immediately to twenty years in state's prison.

From the time of Kean's arrest until he was on his way to the penitentiary to begin sentence less than twenty-four hours had elapsed.

"Freddie" Muth was brought to the court room by his father. He was a different boy from the child who was found dirty and hungry in the unoccupied house after a week's enforced absence from home. He was attired in a neat blue flannel sailor suit and a pink rose was pinned to his lapel. Mr. Muth said the child was none the worse for his experience. In strong contrast was the appearance of the abductor. After a sleepless night in a cell he was haggard and wan. His eyes shifted nervously and his whole frame trembled visibly. He still seemed to fear bodily injury and eyed the spectators suspiciously. The police say he paced the cell all night, sobbing and moaning, his wife and children being uppermost in his mind.

When he was placed in the dock Kean nodded to "Freddie" Muth, who sat beside his father, and the boy smiled. Pointing to Kean, the little fellow said:

"There he is papa; see?"

Kean appeared to exert a strange influence over the child, who showed a feeling akin to friendship for the man.

The hearing was brief. Special Policemen Carle and Vale told of the arrest. James Lenahan, the messenger boy who delivered the note at the school house by which "Freddie" was inveigled from his classroom, related the circumstances of his meeting with Kean. Joseph Sager, the baker, testified to seeing the man and boy in Elmer Rhode's cafe and the latter verified Sager's testimony.

Kean made a statement, which was a repetition of that made to Superintendent of Police Taylor last night. He denied that he had restrained the child in any way, but said on the contrary that "Freddie" had opportunities to leave him several times. He said he had not ill treated the boy, and in this he was corroborated by the Muth child.

Hits This Town, All Right.

Sunbury's old base ball team disbanded on Saturday and on Monday a new one was organized. It is a case of dumping a lot of old players who "Couldn't make good" and beginning over with men who, it is expected, will do the town honor on the diamond. Nowadays a town without a base ball team is like a farm without a chanticleer, says the Williamsport Sun.

HORSE THEIF CAPTURED.

Now Languishing in the Bellefonte Ja

Fort Kline is gradually filling up with summer boarder's. Thursday three were added to quota of inmates of the stone jug.

One of them was Nester Sirgey, a young frenchman, who only last Saturday was discharged from this institution. He had stolen a suit of clothes from William Colpetzer but he settled the case and was released. The Philipsburg Journal of Wednesday gives the following particulars of his latest escapade.

On Monday night a horse was stolen from the stable of William Miller, farmer residing in Taylor township, near Bald Eagle. The authorities here were notified of the stealing yesterday morning, and after some little investigation Chief of Police Sankey surmised that he was on to the guilty party. About 3.30 in the afternoon he started out with Harry Goss to run him down. Arriving at Morrisdale, they found a clue that encouraged them to continue their search. Journeying on, with the evidence brightening with each mile that was passed, they finally overtook a young man near Frenchville having in his possession the missing horse. He proved to be Nester Sirgey, a young Frenchman who has of late been working in this neighborhood, and upon whom suspicion rested. He was placed under arrest, and brought here last night shortly after 12 o'clock and given quarters in the lock-up. He acknowledges his guilt, and is of course sorry he did the stealing. Mr. Miller is expected here this evening, when Sirgey, who is not more than 20 years of age, will be given a hearing

Academy Reception.

The Annual Academy reception was held Thursday evening. For sometime past the ladies have been busy consulting their dressmakers in order to create a costume elaborate enough to be worn at this time. The evening was so perfect as to almost create the impression of having an interest in the institution of learning on the hill.

Hundreds of japanese lanterns very prettily decorated the yard and brightened the scene. From eight to ten the friends and patrons of the Academy were for one more time in the history of the school welcomed to its wide halls. Mrs. James R. Hughes, assisted by Miss Overton, Miss Hill and Miss Harper received those who attended the event. Mrs. Jacobs of Clarksburg, West Virginia, and Mrs. Dubarry of Pittsburg were guests from a distance. Pleasant words of cheer and greeting were passed backward and forward over the saucers of sherbert and cake which was served. The Kettering orchestra of Greensburg furnished the music for the occasion, which greatly added to the pleasure and success of the event. The reception was followed by the dance which was held in the Armory, both of which were largely attended by a gay and happy throng.

Who Was Fooled?

By MABEL MICHAELS

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague

Billy Parker grinned joyously. It would be such a good joke on Miss Allen to send the letter. Here Hugh had been in the Philippines for two years. What would she think when she received a local letter in the well remembered handwriting?

In his mind's eye he could see her eagerly tearing open the letter in the postoffice. He would be outside to yell "April fool!" Miss Allen always stopped for her mail on her way to school. There could be no possible chance of a slip up if he mailed the letter Sunday.

He had been looking in Hugh's desk for some fish hooks when he had run across the envelope, carefully tucked away in the bottom of the drawer. There had been a time when he had carried a lot of the selfsame sort of letters to the teacher, but that had been before Hugh began to talk about the Philippines as a place for young men to grow up with the country.

All day Sunday Billy grinned over his anticipated joke, and Monday morning he entirely ignored the flannel cakes that he might be certain to be at the postoffice in time and went off leaving his mother greatly concerned over his failing appetite. Usually Billy preferred flannel cakes to promptness at school.

He had not long to wait, for presently Nita Allen came briskly along and entered the postoffice. As she turned away Billy noted that she held in her hand only a long blue envelope and a newspaper. He thought regretfully of the flannel cakes as he realized that his April fool had miscarried and turned and followed Miss Allen down the street.

There were the usual pranks played in the school yard, but Billy, always the leader in all mischief, stood apart and wondered. He was certain that he had stamped the letter properly, and anyway Mr. Meade would have given the letter to her and collected the money had the stamp fallen off. It was something he could not understand, though he puzzled his brain until the last bell rang, and he slipped into his seat just in time.

Some one must have been playing jokes on the teacher, for her eyes snapped and about her mouth there played a smile that made Billy want to hug her. Even when Ned Matthews sought to pick up a reader only to have it jerked from beneath his grasp by a bit of thread Miss Allen only looked the other way and tapped with her pencil on the desk, though surely at other times the source of this demonstration would have been as patent to her as to the class.

During the lunch hour Billy's mystification was further increased, for, stopping at the postoffice, he asked for mail for Miss Allen. "She was expecting two letters this morning, and she only got one," he explained to Mr. Meade.

"Go on with your April fool jokes," he laughed good naturedly. "She got two letters this morning."

Billy knew better, but there was no use asking questions. He had seen her come out with just the one big envelope, and that was from the school committee. The other was not under the big one, for he had pretended to drop his cap as an excuse to look at the under side and there had been nothing hidden beneath.

But if Billy had hung about the schoolroom instead of pursuing his investigations at the postoffice he would have seen that Mr. Meade was right, for on teacher's desk was the envelope he had dropped into the box and for the tenth time teacher, with glowing cheeks, was reading the note.

"I have not the courage to speak," it ran, "but I am coming back Monday on the 4:38. If your answer is 'Yes,' will you meet me at the train? If you are not there I shall know the answer is 'No,' but if you can find it in your heart to love me, dear, please be there to greet me. The others think I am coming on the night train, and we shall have a chance to walk home alone."

The explanation was very simple. She had slipped the envelope inside of the folds of the paper as she had received it. Somehow she did not want others to see the precious missive, and with instinctive modesty she had hidden it.

The afternoon dragged interminably for her. Every stroke of the clock, every tick of the pendulum brought Hugh nearer to her, and yet the minutes passed with leaden wings. It was only a ten minute walk to the station, and she lingered over the compositions, her eyes constantly seeking the slow ticking watch in front of her until at last the minute hand had come almost to the half hour. She put on her wraps and hurried down the street.

Billy, keeping watch at the postoffice, was spending a weary vigil, but her road took her in the opposite direction, and he did not know that he was waiting in vain.

The train had just whistled as she reached the platform, and in a few minutes the heavy string of coaches pulled into the station yard, the engine panting like some tired animal.

She looked quickly up and down the long line of cars until with a tremendous acceleration of the heart's beatings she recognized a muffled form stepping from one of the sleepers.

"Nita," he cried as she sped toward him, "this is a surprise indeed!"

"Didn't you expect me?" she demanded smilingly. "Did you think I could forget so soon?"

Hugh looked puzzled as he fell into step and passed out of the station. "But no one knew I was coming," he declared. "You don't mean to tell me that my advent was anticipated?"

"I did not tell a soul," she said. "I only got your letter this morning."

"But I did not write any one, not even you," was the puzzled declaration. Nita laughed.

"You didn't mean to say that you expect a schoolteacher with a class like mine to forget that this is April fool?" she asked. "The boys were tormenting me all day, and now you want me to believe that you did not write me that letter. You must have written some one else, too, for mine bore the local post mark."

"Seeing's believing," he suggested.

With a pretty flush, she thrust her hand inside her jacket and presently withdrew the letter. He glanced at the superscription and smiled.

"And this is your answer?" he said gently. Her eyes gave reply. "I have the courage to ask you myself now," he said tenderly. "This is a letter I wrote before I went away. Do you remember the time I went to New York to arrange about my going to the east?"

"Then you didn't send it?" she asked tremulously.

"No," he said. "I did not send it because I have come all the way from Manila to ask you to go back with me. I never had the courage to send this. I think it must be that young brother of mine. He probably ran across it in my desk."

"What can you think of me?" she said, with glistening eyes.

"If I told you," he said sincerely, "I should make a scandal by hugging you right here on the street. I think you are the dearest little woman in the world. I never had hoped to learn my answer so quickly."

"You have Billy to thank for that," she laughed.

"I don't know whether to thrash or thank him," he smiled. "Perhaps it would be better to do both—in that order."

"Huh," mused Billy a few hours later as he lovingly fingered a gold piece. "Hugh says that I'm the April fool. I don't think so. He's in the front parlor acting more like a fool than I am. I wouldn't just sit kissin' a girl like that. I'd go up to the postoffice and show 'em—where the fellers is fools if I'd just come home."

One of the Wonders of Physics.

An experienced mechanic who was asked what he regarded as the most wonderful thing for general utility replied: "The tracking of a car wheel is the most wonderful thing to me in the whole range of science and invention. Here are two rails, uphill and downhill, round the sharp curves and along false tangents, and upon them fly at more than a mile a minute, without jar or jostle, a dozen heavy cars drawn by an engine weighing sixty tons. Passengers realize no danger, yet there is only the little flange of a wheel between them and eternity. An inch and a half of steel turned up on the inner side of the wheel holds up the whole train as securely to the rails as if it were bolted there in grooves."

Hide Your Fruit Trees.

As lawn specimens fruit trees are nearly always disappointing. They have more insect enemies and fungous diseases than first class ornamental trees and shrubs. If you spray them they are unsightly; if you do not your lawn is covered with wormy fruits, which look bad and smell worse. The peach is a short lived, delicate tree which is particularly subject to San Jose scale. Plums and cherries are sure to yield wormy fruit unless you jar the curculios out of them long before breakfast or unless you let the chickens run beneath the trees. Both are violent suppositions for a home lawn.—Country Life In America.

A Natural Inference.

For no other reason than that his poultry look told him to feed lime he slavishly fed lime and asked himself no questions.

The hens were variously affected.

The Leghorns found difficulty in keeping their hot Italian blood from open revolt. The Cochins, with true oriental apathy, said it was fate anyway. But the old Plymouth Rock had the American sense of humor.

"He thinks we're going to lay bricks," she cackled.—Puck.

THE SPANIARD.

His Courtesy, His Cigarette and His Lottery Ticket.

Of the courteous manners of all Spaniards a traveler writes: "So anxious is every one to be of service to others that the stranger is apt to consider the Spaniards very inquisitive people. An experience in a Madrid tramcar was enlightening in this direction. A woman in getting into the car appeared to have slipped and hurt her foot. She and her husband began an animated discussion upon the incident, and of the dozen others in the car every one except ourselves craned forward to listen. The passengers were well assorted, ranging as they did from a captain in uniform down to a woman almost of the beggar class. But one and all in turn joined in the discussion without exciting the least resentment, opinions being apparently welcomed. Gentlemen arriving at their destination ceased arguing, raised their hats and went out, leaving others in possession until the principals left."

"There is no hour of the day or night which a Spaniard deems inappropriate to the practice of smoking," the same writer observes. "Whenever he finds time hanging heavily, which is frequently, he lights a cigarette. Time hangs heavily on a Spaniard's mind in the brief interval between the courses at lunch and dinner, whenever he wakes at night, when traveling between station and hotel in an omnibus and always when in a railway train, regardless of ladies. The practice of smoking is so universal in Spain that railway compartments for nonsmokers exist in theory only, and the habit, combined with that of loud talking at all hours of the night and morning, makes the average Spaniard undesirable as a traveling companion, especially at night."

Of the sturdy beggars who overrun Madrid: "The beggars usually have some pretense for asking alms in the shape of a decrepit guitar or fiddle under the cloak, where it remains. Another plea is the sale of lottery tickets, the lottery being a great institution in Spain. Each ticket costs 5 pesetas (about $1), and beggars in absolute rags, as often as not children, rush about with strings of these for sale."—Chicago News.

WIT IN CONGRESS.

Some Famous Retorts Made During the Heat of Debate.

One of the most famous of Reed's retorts was made at the expense of Springer of Illinois. The "Maine giant" had just read one of Springer's own speeches in refutation of the latter's argument just concluded. The Illinoisan launched into philosophy upon the privilege of progressive thinkers to change their opinions.

"I honor them for it," he continued. "An honest man is the noblest work of God. As for me, Mr. Chairman, in the words of an eminent American statesman, 'I would rather be right than be president.'"

"The gentleman from Illinois needn't worry, Mr. Chairman," drawled Reed. "He'll never be either!"

During the bitter fight against "Reed rules" the house was thrown into convulsions by General Spinola, who, pointing to the painting of the "Siege of Yorktown" hanging in the hall, gravely accused Speaker Reed of counting the Hessians in the background of the picture in order to make up a quorum.

The general always wore a tremendously high collar, so high, in fact, that Representative Tim Campbell tapped it one day with the ferule of his cane and inquired, to the amusement of the house, "Is General Spinola within?"

During the famous deadlock fight in the house over the civil rights bill General Ben Butler favored a Sunday session.

"Bad as I am, I have some respect for God's day," replied Sam Randall of Pennsylvania.

"Don't the Bible say that it is lawful to pull your ox or ass out of a pit on the Sabbath?" asked Butler. "You have thirty-seven asses on your side of the house, and I want to get them out of this ditch tomorrow. I think I am engaged in holy work."

"Don't do it," replied Randall. "I expect some day to see you in a better world."

"You'll be there, as you are here, a member of the lower house," flashed back the general, with telling effect.—American Magazine.

A Hundred Million Suns.

A peep into the heavens through a modern telescope is a peep into the very depths of mystery. With such an instrument one may gaze upon 100,000,000 stars, each of them a burning, blazing sun. From what little we know of creation we cannot but believe that each of those suns is giving light and heat to a train of planets, just in the same manner that our sun gives light and life to his little flock of worlds. Beyond those 100,000,000 suns there may be hundreds of millions more. Thus they may continue "system after system and worlds without end."

English Reward For Teaching.

If there is one occupation which Englishmen are unanimous in condemning as degraded and degrading it is that most fascinating, most difficult, delicate and important work, the training of the mind. In what are humorously called "the higher walks" of teaching there are respectable salaries to be earned and agreeable rooms or houses for occupation. Here, purged of the dross of utility, a man may once more take rank as a gentleman, and if he becomes head of a house the supreme uselessness of his position commands universal and silent respect.—Nineteenth Century

SUBTERRANEAN RIVERS.

Yucatan's Only Streams Flow Beneath Coral Rock.

There are no streams in Yucatan which flow above the ground, but the whole peninsula is one vast table of coral rock and beneath it are immense sheets of fresh water, with regular though ill defined tides and currents. Along the coasts these subterranean waters are quite near the surface, but in the interior, where the calcareous layer is of great thickness, the waters are low down. At intervals they break into caverns formed by earthquakes by pressure of their own force or by the infiltration of surface water into the natural grottoes of the coral rock and wherever the water can be reached, whether through artificial pits or by the operations of nature, the place is called a cenote. There are a great many of them scattered all over Yucatan, and those near Merida are utilized as public bathhouses, affording most refreshing resorts.

Centuries ago the Indians marked the courses of the subterranean rivers by heaps of stones and always built their cities close by the water caves, as their ruins show, and it is interesting to note to this day all the civilized centers of Yucatan have arisen around these natural reservoirs. There are many forms of cenotes. When the water flows at a slight depth and the calcareous layer has been only partially eaten away there follows an irregular sinking, which forms a cave, opening from side to side, but when the crust is thicker and the underground stream has a regular course the soil is generally corroded in a circular space and the vault thus formed, lacking support, falls in, making an immense open wall. Often the crust is so deep that the soft parts only crumble down, leaving a small aperture toward the top, fashioning a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites galore. Again, it happens that the crust is exceedingly thick, when a colossal subterranean passage, like a tunnel, is formed. In short, all the variations which an undisturbed stream may produce in a friable soil by the silent work of ages may be here witnessed. The cenote of which I write is a natural cavern nearly fifty feet deep, broken down at one side, thus forming a gigantic arch. Within it appears every form of stalagmite and stalactite, and its roof is perforated with holes, in which are thousands of birds' and hornets' nests. At the bottom of it, reached by a flight of stone steps from the charming garden above, is an extensive sheet of clear, fresh water, containing a multitude of tiny fish (Pescado cenote) similar to those found in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky, only these are not eyeless. The overhanging roots of trees fringe its broken arch, affording shelter to innumerable lizards and iguanas, which dart along the ledges like embodied sunbeams, while above them countless swallows circle in masses so dense that the whirring of their wings produces a deafening noise, echoed from below in hollow reverberations.

LEGEND OF THE GARTER.

Contradictory Versions of the Foundation of the Order.

I knew, as every schoolboy knows, the legend that a certain Countess of Salisbury dropped her garter at a ball and that the king, picking it up amid the smiles of courtiers, handed it to her with the happy and now immortal phrase, "Honi soit qui mal y pense." But this legend, I recalled, had had to go the way of the story of King Alfred and the cakes, the story of William Tell and the apple and many another pretty fairy tale of history. At last I went to Sir Nicholas Harris Nicolas' "History of the Orders of Knighthood," where I found a delightful mass of contradictory authority produced.

The tale of the ensign and name of the order were first told by Polydore Vergil (1470-1555), who wrote in the time of Henry VII. and Henry VIII. and who said that the lady was "the queen or the king's mistress." Segar, whose work, "Honor, Military and Civil," appeared in 1602, 250 years after the order was founded, was the first to say that it was the Countess of Salisbury. Other writers say that it was the Countess of Kent. John Anstis (1669-1744), garter king of arms, who published several heraldic works, ridicules the whole story. He confesses that an author of Henry VI.'s time, who wrote in Latin and whose work is now entirely lost, upheld it.

Raphael Holinshed, a chrodicler, who died in 1580, tells the story in detail and says the lady was the queen, which surely rather spoils the significance of the legend. Sir Harris Nicolas himself thinks the story is not improbable, although he urges the fact that Jean Froissart, who is the best contemporary authority on the reign of Edward III., while he has much to say about the order in his hundredth chapter, does not refer to it, and Nicholas admits that this tells very much against the supposed origin of the story, but Froissart may have thought the matter too trivial to relate. By the way, I feel very much aggrieved that G. C. Macaulay in the abridged volume of Froissart that he published through the Macmillans should have ruthlessly cut this hundredth chapter.

It is not, I may add, claimed that the incident caused the foundation of the Order of the Garter, but only that it gave Edward III. the idea for naming the order which he had resolved to found in any case. In the absence of any other solution than that which rests on these shadowy foundations I think we may still go on accepting the pretty legend, but I repeat my expression of dissatisfaction with the popular histories that they should leave such matters as this severely alone.—London Sphere.

THE TIDY TADPOLE.

How This Cheerful Little Cannibal Eats and Develops.

A wonderful spirit of tidiness seems to pervade the tadpole world. They always eat whatever has become useless—their own eggs, their superfluous companions. Even those who are only weakly are cleared out of the way and the victims take it all as a matter of course. I have disturbed a strong member of the community just as he had begun to dine off the tail of a weaker brother, but the sufferer has not troubled to escape—he simply waited till the fratricide returned to complete his deadly work.

For some time there is no grave change in the tadpoles. They simply grow and become so far transparent that their internal mechanism, which consists of one coil of intestines, is plainly visible. When, however, they are about three months old a careful observer can distinguish a tiny foot on either side of the base of the tail. These grow slowly, but seem unable to move independently until shortly before the border land is passed which leads to perfect froghood. The hind legs have reached their full size before the front ones appear, and, while the feet grow slowly, the hands are ready made and can be used at once. For a day or two they can be seen under the skin before they venture forth, and their possessor is very restless and excited. He rushes madly about, jostling his comrades, and no doubt being voted a bore; then a more vigorous effort breaks the skin and the tiny hand and arm appear.

There seems some rule about the order of precedence here, as there is when the whiskers go, for last year my tadpoles, almost without exception, had their right hands some hours before the left, while on previous occasions I have had an entirely left handed crew.—Chambers' Journal.

MUSIC AT SEA.

Conditions Under Which Ships' Sails Sometimes Sing.

Some curious facts have been noted with regard to the sound conducting qualities of ships' sails. When rendered concave by a gentle breeze, the widespread sails of a ship are said to be excellent conductors of sound.

A ship was once sailing along the coast of Brazil, far out of sight of land. Suddenly several of the crew, while walking along the deck, noticed that when passing and repassing a particular spot they always heard with great distinctness the sound of bells chiming sweet music, as though being rung but a short distance away.

Dumfounded by this phenomenon, they quickly communicated the discovery to their shipmates, but none of them was able to solve the enigma as to the origin of these seemingly mysterious sounds which came to them across the water.

Months afterward, upon returning to Brazil, the crew determined to satisfy their curiosity. Accordingly they mentioned the circumstance to their friends and were informed that at the time when the sounds were heard the bells in the cathedral of San Salvador, on the coast, had been ringing to celebrate a feast held in honor of one of the saints.

Their sound, wonderful to relate, favored by a gentle, steady breeze, had traveled a distance of upward of 100 miles over the smooth water and had been brought to a focus by the sails at the particular locality in which the sweet sounds were first heard.

This is but one of several instances of a similar kind, trustworthy authorities claiming that this same music is often heard under somewhat the same circumstances and especially in a moisture laden atmosphere.—London Tit-Bits.

How to Reach Safety in Fires.

Familiarize yourself with the location of windows and natural escapes.

Learn the position of all stairways, particularly the top landing and scuttle to the roof.

Keep the doors of rooms shut.

Open windows from the top.

Wet a towel, stuff it in the mouth, breathe through it instead of nose so as not to inhale smoke.

Stand at window and get benefit of outside air.

If room fills with smoke keep close to floor and crawl along by the walls to the window.

Never jump unless the blaze behind is scorching you; not then if the firemen with scaling ladders are near.

Never go to the roof unless as a last resort and you know there is escape to adjoining buildings.

In big buildings fire always goes to the top.

Never jump through flames in a building without covering the head with a blanket or heavy clothing.

Never get excited; try to recall all the means of exit.

How to Keep Hats Looking Fresh.

In traveling from one place to another in summer you may often be at a loss as to how to keep your hats fresh, as the tray of a trunk is generally crowded with little things. Try taking a handbox with you in this way, says Ladies' Home Journal: Cut down the sides of the box at the corners, fold and lay flat on the bottom of the trunk. When staying anywhere tie the corners together and you will have a good box for your hats. A good way to pack hats in the regular hat tray is to bore four holes, one in each side, near the corner and half an inch from the bottom. Take four pieces of tape, each half a yard long, and after tying a knot in one end run the tape through the holes, leaving the knots on the outside of the tray, and the loose ends inside. Place a hat in the bottom and tie the tapes over it, which are diagonally opposite each other, together.

RECKONING TIME.

The Watch of the Man In the Street Is Set by the Stars.

Time is a perennially interesting subject. Before the chronometer in the jeweler's window a procession is constantly passing. The banker pulls out his $700 repeater, compares it with the chronometer and moves on. The office boy with just as much dignity consults the dollar timepiece that bulges his little waistcoat. Both are equally under the spell of time.

As most persons know, England supplies the world with that valuable but impalpable commodity, that purely arbitrary thing which we call time. The meridian of the Royal observatory at Greenwich is the point from which the day of the civilized world is reckoned, but in America the United States Naval observatory in Washington determines Greenwich time and distributes it by telegraph.

In the end the watch of the man in the street is set by the stars. Out of the vast number in the heavens there are some 600, visible either to the eye or the camera, which are known to be practically invariable. The astronomer selects one of them. Through the transit instrument—a telescope pointed at the meridian—he watches, telegraphic key in hand. On the lens of the telescope are eleven hair lines. The center one marks the meridian. As the star crosses each of these lines the operator presses his key, the wires of which connect with an automatic recording clock called a chronograph.

This shows at what time the star crossed the meridian. Astronomical tables determine the time at which it should have crossed. Comparison of the standard clock with these tables shows whether or not the clock is right.

The time is distributed at noon. Three minutes before 12 o'clock thousands of telegraph operators sit in silence waiting for the click of the key which shall tell them that the "master clock" in Washington has begun to speak. At one minute before 12 it begins, beating every second until the fifty-fifth. Then after the pause, comes a single beat, which marks exact noon, and for another day the world knows that it has the correct time to the fraction of a second.—Youth's Companion.

A FEW DON'TS.

Don't be reckless, especially in your lying.

Don't give to the Lord and then go out and rob a widow.

Don't acquire the borrowing habit, or the day will come when you will run out of friends.

Don't marry an indolent man expecting him to brace up, or you may have to take in washing to pay for the brace.

Don't be so mean minded that you can see no good in a man. He may be the first to loan you money in time of need.

Don't lay up everything for a rainy day and go hungry all through life. Besides, where you are going it may never rain.

Don't spread butter on both sides of your bread just because you have $3 in your pockets. An earthquake may come along and shake the change out of them.—Denver News.

Development of a Chick.

The development of a chick within the egg is one of the most wonderful things in nature. At the end of the fifty-eighth hour of incubation the heart begins to beat, two vesicles are seen and a few hours later the auricles also appear. On the fourth day the outlines of the wings may be perceived and sometimes of the head also; on the fifth day the liver is visible; on the sixth other internal organs appear. In 190 hours the beak is fully formed; in 200 hours the ribs are clearly developed; in 240 hours the feathers are visible; in 268 hours the eyes appear; in 288 the ribs are completed and the feathers on the breast; in 330 the lungs, stomach and breast have assumed a natural appearance. On the eighteenth day the first faint piping of the chick is sometimes audible.

Noisy Old London.

Modern cities are not as noisy as those of other days. For example, in London in the time of King George II. the streets were still cobbled and the pack horse of Elizabethan memory had been replaced by heavy carts and wagons. Barrels of beer and heavy cases were dragged about on drays of iron without wheels, and to add to the tumult heavy signs in immense frames of ironwork hung out in front of shops and houses and croaked interminably. Street cries never ceased for a moment all day. All the smaller necessaries, such as pins, thread, string, ink, straps, fish, milk, cakes, bread, drugs, herbs, matches, were hawked in the streets.

The Sea Otter.

The sea otter combines the habits of a seal with the intelligence and amusing character of the otter. When met in herds far out at sea, which is but seldom now, they are commonly seen swimming on their backs. They even eat their food lying in this position on the water and nurse their young ones on their chests between their paws, exactly as a south sea island mother swims with her baby in the water. When swimming in this attitude they even shade their eyes with their paws when the sun dazzles them.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living in Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney pills. I took only a few doses before I began to feel better and when I had continued using them for a while I was thoroughly cured. My back regained its strength and the pain left me. I have had no return of the trouble since."

Pepsicola Tablets are the prescription of Dr. Davis, a physician who devoted a lifetime to the study of stomach trouble, and, if your food does not agree with you, if you are tired, nervous, worn out, low spirited and your energy at low par, it may interest you to know that no other prescription in this world has a greater record of cures behind it, and there is nothing more certain to give you relief. Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Demoralized Democrats

The Democrats of Pennsylvania have conjured with the delusive fusion idea so thoughtlessly that they are in danger of losing their own identity by absorption by either the Lincoln Republican or Prohibition party. The Democratic leaders in the various counties have encouraged their followers to walk in the paths which lead to fusion with any party or faction which promises a share of the political prizes until many of the adherents of true Jeffersonian Democracy find themselves in the wilderness of confusion.

Colonel Guffey is said to have abandoned his intention to force a straight Democratic nomination for Govenor, but the Colonel's chief lieutenant, P Gray Meek, declares for the naming of a straight-out Democrat Guffey, if he shall have any influence with the Democratic state convention, will defeat the endorsement of Lewis Emery on personal grounds. If he cannot control the convention the wily Colonel will accept Rudolph Blankenburg as a compromise condidate.

The revolt against Colonel Guffy may not survive the blandishments of that versatile boss, and when the convention shall meet the delegates may seriously reflect upon the probable result which would follow the withdrawal of his counsel and barrel. Whichever way the Democratic voter looks he sees nothing to encourage him to the belief that the action which the state convention shall take on the 27 th will revivify and enthuse the party in the coming Gubernatorial campaign.

CHRONIC WEARINESS.

Robert J. Burdette once Wrote this Bit of Good Philosophy.

You are "too tired to go to church?" That's sheer nonsense. There isn't a place on the continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day; freeze in a hammock loll in a rocking chair; go to sleep over a book. That isn't resting, thats loafing. Tell yourself honestly—you like to think you are honest—did you ever in all your life see a loafer who looked rested? Did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time? The people who try to rest are always tired. Resting is the hardest work in the world, when you make work out of it. About a year ago I stopped in a Boston street to watch a group of laborers. It was noon hour. They had been at work all the morning digging a sewer excavation. They had eaten their dinners from their little tin pails and now they were "resting." Some of them were pitching quoits, and others were putting the shot, with a great round boulder They were workingmen "resting" and sitting on the curb stone watching them—too lazy to even stand up and look at them, their lazy chins resting on their lazy hands, and their lazy elbows supported on their lazy knees, were the loafers who had been watching them work all the morning. These fellows were too tired even to join the game by which the workers rested themselves. You have no need to loaf all day Sunday. Two hours in church; two hours of the quiet; the sermon, the reading; the uplift; which comes from the new channels into which your thought, your mind is led, will rest you more, physically, morally, intellectually, than will all the day spent in trying to "rest."

How a Lovely Face Grows.

"Oh, she has a lovely face," said a girl enthusiastically. "But she isn't young," added a second, doubtfully. "And her flatures aren't at all regular," chimed in a third.

"Still she has a lovely face," summed up the fourth, and they all agreed.

The woman of whom they were talking was elderly and had been plain in youth. Nobody called her so now. Passers by in the street glanced a second time at the beautiful face under the plain little velvet bonnet, and her circle of friends were never tired gazing at her. But as I have said, in her early youth she was a plain girl. Often she troubled, like girls will, over her lack of beauty; Then, one day she made a discovery. Her looking-glass told her that cross thoughts and sharp words were reflected in her dulled skin and eyes. Sullen habits dropped the corners of her mouth, and drew a long line from thence to the chin; anger wrinkled her forehead, and stormy passion pinched her lips into a tight thin straight line of red.

Next, she noted that her ill temper was spoiling her soft, pink and white complexion. If she felt cross before any meal, for digestion was bad, and that meant a flushed face, red or swollen nose and a tinge of yellowness in the skin. Simply, at first, because she loved beauty and desired with her whole heart to be beautiful, she began to curb her natural petulance, and sulky or hasty temper. Finding discipline resulted not only in a sweetness of look and a clearness of eyes, but in a peaceful she continued to make mind a beautiful character.

Before long she had her reward. Patience, gentleness, pure living, high thinking, noble aims did their work and people began to speak of her as "that pleasant looking Miss ——," and finally after years of marriage and the care of a family, young girls regarded her clear complexion, bright eyes and smooth brow with wonder, sometimes wistfully saying: "How very pretty you must have been when you were young. Mrs. truthfully replied, "My dear I was ——!" to which she invaribly and much plainer than you think!"

Sculpters and artists will tell you there is no face more beautiful than that countenance in which a beautiful soul and character show. It is not so very marvelous, this miracle of ugliness transformed. The body is but the veil of the spirit What we are within will reveal itself without.

Gentian Root.

Gentian root, often used as a tonic, is considered in many malarial countries a remedy against intermittent fever. Especially is this the case in Corsica, in that section of the island near the town of Aleria, which is infested with malaria. The inhabitants recently protested violently against the introduction of quinine on the part of the medical authorities, declaring that they would not abandon the remedy which had been used among them for centuries, the gentian root, either powdered or simply masticated.

Quite the Contrary.

"After all, my friend," began the solemn stranger, "life is but a dream, a"—

"Not much, it ain't," snorted the hard headed man. "In nearly every dream I ever had I was gettin' more money than I knowed what to do with."—Philadelphia Press.

MANY PEOPLE HAVE CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND DON'T KNOW IT.

Backache, the First Symptom of Kidney Trouble.

Pe-ru-na Is Invaluable in Such Cases.

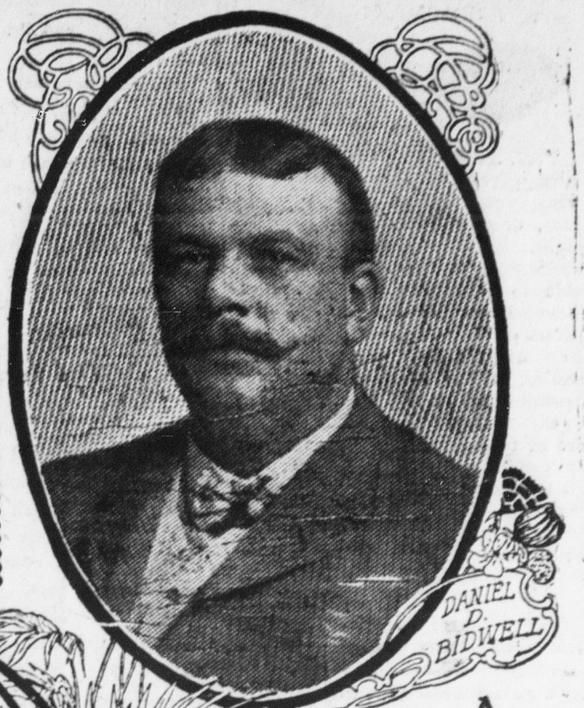
Prominent Persons Who Have Been Cured.

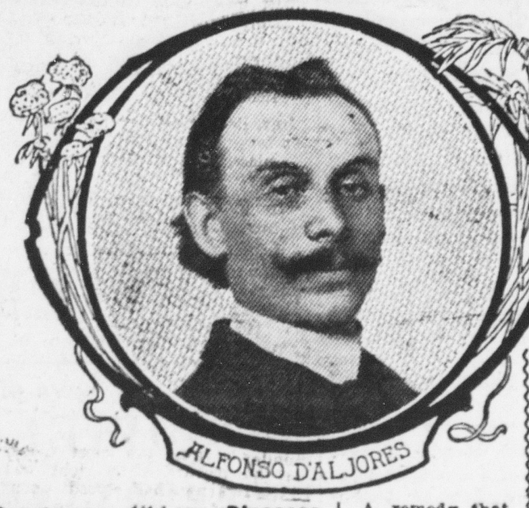
Daniel D. Bidwell, Supervisor, Notary Public and a member of I. O. O. F., 160 Pearl street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"Having used Peruna for a short time, I desire to write you as to my present condition.

"When I obtained Peruna I was suffering from chronic indigestion and kidney and bladder trouble. It seemed to help the circulation at once. My digestion is now perfect and my kidneys and bladder do not trouble me in any way. In fact, I give Peruna the entire credit.

"Hoping that your remedy will reach all sufferers in a similar case, and thanking you, I remain,"—Daniel D. Bidwell, N. P.





A South American Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Count Alfonso d' Aljores, of 287 Plaza del Torro, Buenos Ayres, South America, while visiting in Chicago, wrote from 247 Cleveland avenue, that city, as follows:

"I used Peruna a short time ago to build up my system, which was all run down from overwork, worry and a cold which had settled in my back and kidneys, causing me serious annoyance and trouble.

"When I returned home from work at night, I was so exhausted and worn out, together with the pain in my back, that I felt I would never be able to take up the burden of life again in the morning, but when morning came I would get out somehow. This dragging through life continued for a couple of months, when I decided I would take Peruna.

"I am glad to state that I found it just the medicine for me. In a couple of months I was restored to perfect health and strength, and my work was no longer a burden. I therefore endorse your medicine as worthy of the confidence of the sick."—Alfonso d' Aljores.

Dangerous Kidney Diseases Cured.

At the appearance of the first symptom of kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken.

This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease.

It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, and prevents the escape of serum from the blood.

Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain.

It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

A remedy that cures all the catarrhal derangements of the kidneys should certainly be considered a household necessity. Peruna is such a remedy.

A Prominent Merchant Restored to Health By Pe-ru-na.

Mr. John Nimmo, 215 Lippincott St., Toronto, Can., a prominent merchant of that city, and also a member of the Masonic Order, writes:

"I have been in poor health generally for over four years. When I caught a bad cold last winter it settled in the bladder and kidneys, causing serious trouble. I took two greatly advertised kidney remedies without getting the desired results.

"Peruna is the only remedy which was [illegible] of any benefit to me. It seemed to act in perfect harmony with the system, eliminating the poisons, stopping the ravages of the disease and gradually restoring me to health and strength.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given here. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

Correspondence held strictly confidential.

Revised Formula. For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of greatful friends, urging that Pe-ru-na be given a sight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quiet a length time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Pe-ru na that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

"S. B. HARTMAN, M. D."

HANDLING MONEY.

It Is No Temptation to the Seasoned Bank Teller.

"Money? Don't the sight of so much of it make me hungry for it? Not at all. To tell the truth, it is like so much mud to me."

Thus spoke a teller in a Denver bank. He was talking to a young man outside the cage. On the counter were heaped piles of gold and silver coin and bunches of paper money.

"I'm sure I couldn't stand the constant temptation to appropriate it for my own use," said the man outside.

"Yes, you could," replied the teller. "You could easily after being in here a week. For the first few days the money would look pretty good to you, and you'd have to use your will power to keep away from it, but after a week or so it doesn't seem like money. It seems like merely an article you deal in, just as potatoes seem to the grocer. There isn't a sixty dollar a month bank clerk in a thousand who thinks of stealing the money he handles unless he is in debt and is being crowded for funds. To the bank employee who has his debts paid and has enough to keep from thinking of an urgent need for cash money has no value. Handling money is just like eating to a teller. As long as he has enough food in his stomach he has no desire for more and even a big, fine, juicy steak has no temptation for him. But let him get good and hungry, and he'll covet that steak. The only way for a man who handles money in a bank to be free from the temptation to appropriate it is to keep out of debt and not develop any urgent and expensive ambitions."—Denver Post.

No Back Action.

Mr. Gladstone knew how to admit that he was in the wrong. On one occasion he did so candidly and handsomely, as becomes a gentleman. But he preferred to keep clear of the necessity for apologies and had scant belief in their efficacy. "You can't unpull a man's nose," he once said to his private secretary, Sir Algernon West.

Knew How It Was.

"I presume you spend all you make?"

"No; I don't spend a tenth of it."

"Then you must have a nice little balance in the bank?"

"Nope, not a cent."

"Shake, old chap. I'm married myself."—Houston Post.

BUNDLE HANDKERCHIEFS.

Introduced Into New England by the Salem Sea Captains.

Housewives of today would not know what was meant by the bundle handkerchief, yet 100 years ago the woman who did not have a pile of them neatly folded and ironed and laid away in smooth piles in a drawer of one of the capacious closets which were then built into houses was considered a poor housekeeper. The bundle handkerchief was first introduced by the Salem sea captains. It was brought from abroad with choice things, such as sandalwood fans, guava jelly and amber beads.

Those imported were the white india silk and were used to tie around the "best cap" box when ladies went out to spend the afternoon. Those of home make were of squares of calico or muslin and used for everyday bundles. When ladies went visiting to other towns their piles of dainty, handmade underware were wrapped in fine lawn or linen handkerchiefs sweet with lavender and orris. A new gown always came home from the dressmaker's carefully pinned in a thin, worn and much used madras handkerchief.

No Salem infant was considered to have been properly introduced to society till it had dangled in a bundle handkerchief from a pair of steelyard scales.

When the servants went to the bakery they carried a couple of coarse blue checked bundle handkerchiefs, and in one was wrapped the pot of beans, and in the other was wrapped the brown bread.

Louisa Alcott's Education.

In 1846 Mrs. Abbott, with some family property, bought the house known now as the Wayside, since Hawthorne bought and renamed it in 1852, says F. B. Sanborn in the Critic. The Alcotts had called it Hillside and had passed pleasant childish years there. Louisa's story telling gift was developed here, and in the barn her earliest plays were acted by herself and her sisters and schoolmates. In her earlier years at Concord she had been for a short time a pupil of Henry Thoreau and still earlier of her father's Boston school. Her other education came irregularly from her parents, from a temporary governess and sometimes from town schools, but she always missed the careful education that most of the Concord girls had, either in public or in private schools.

IN LIBBY PRISON.

A New Story of Bishop McCabe, Once a Captive Chaplain.

An interesting incident of life in Libby prison was recalled by Colonel C. E. Bradshaw addressing a meeting of representatives of the patriotic organizations of Washington. The name of Bishop McCabe was mentioned.

"I recall one of the darkest, stormiest, rainiest nights at old Libby," said Colonel Bradshaw. "The Union prisoners were huddled together on one of the lower floors, and the rain was coming in on them in a perfect deluge. Among the captives in blue was Bishop McCabe, then a chaplain. In his excess of good nature he saw the humorous side of even such a situation as I have described. While our boys, hungry and cold, were trying to keep warm and dry a voice was raised above the howling of the tempest outside and could be heard in all parts of the prison:

"'Hands on your pocketbooks!'

"The voice was that of Chaplain McCabe, who knew full well that there was not a single dollar in all that great crowd of shivering Yankee soldiers. The sally caused an outburst of laughter notwithstanding the uncomfortableness of the situation."—Washington Star.

The Admiral Relented.

"While Admiral Porter was in command of the Mississippi squadron and at a time when they were most actively engaged," said Captain Lloyd G. Harris of St. Louis, "a young ensign made his appearance on the flagship and astounded the admiral by asking him for a leave of absence. 'Why, sir,' roared Porter, 'don't you understand that no officer can leave at this time, no matter who he is or what his excuse?'

"'But, admiral, it is a case of life and death. I must go.'

"'But you can't go. It is impossible.'

"'Please hear me, Admiral Porter. When I entered the service I was engaged to as pretty a girl as there is in northern Illinois. I have just got word that one of those miserable home guards has been courting her, and my friend says it looks as though if I don't come back pretty soon I will lose her. Now, admiral, I think, under the circumstances, you might let me go for a week at least.'

"Porter's heart melted. The ensign got leave, went home and married the girl in triumph."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A DINNER DECEPTION

By Kate M. Cleary

Copyright, 1905, by G. T. Viskniskki

The telegram dropped from the hand of Isola Ray.

"Now, what do you think of that, Funny?" she asked.

Funny, a big, tortoise shell cat, signified her sympathy by putting her purring head against the amber satin slipper of her young mistress. The latter picked up the yellow slip of paper and read it over.

"Will bring Edward Carden up to dinner this evening. Carte blanche in all things, of course, but do the best you can, dear girl."

Now, Isola Ray, but lately returned from college to make home for and with a wealthy bachelor brother, was ignorant of household lore and quite preposterously pretty. Thus suddenly confronted by an emergency under singularly exasperating domestic circumstances, the consciousness of her own inefficiency dismayed her.

THE DINNER IN THE COZY DINING ROOM WENT OFF DELIGHTFULLY.

"Funny" (she crumbled the yellow slip into a ball and aimed it at the wastebasket), "let us consider what we had better do."

Funny, not at all averse to being cuddled in lace draped, faintly fragant arms, promptly lost herself in somnolence.

"If only Delia had not gone to the funeral of that grandchild that expires with periodical regularity every three weeks!" Oblivious of the indifference of her auditor, Miss Ray kept murmuring on. "And if Ellen Jane were not in bed with a jumping toothache—we might pull through, Funny. Dear, dear! All the years I was learning Latin, why could I not have learned how to cook something except fudges? Gracious! Who's that?" Funny was promptly and peremptorily dispossessed.

Miss Ray hurried in response to the brisk knock at the back door. "It's never you, my dear!" cried Isola Ray. She had flung open the door and was gathering a little sweet faced, apple cheeked countried woman into the joyful embrace of her loving young arms. "I'd be glad to see you any time, Aunt Elvira, but just now—well, just now your coming seems providential!"

Aunt Elvira returned cordially the caress of the gracious arms and lips.

"Now, how does that happen, honey?" she asked.

She had entered the kitchen—all shining tiles, enamel and blue and white kitchen ware. She put her old brown, cracked, bulging bag down by the sink and with one dexterous twist had divested herself of bonnet and coat.

"Oh, Delia—that's the cook—has gone to one of her periodical funerals. Her relatives are legion, and every few weeks one of them dies. And the other maid has toothache. And Victor telegraphed he was bringing his best friend—who has not before visited this city—up to dinner tonight. You know how my brother detests any cooking except what is done at home. And—beyond fudges or a good salad—I don't know how to make a thing!"

"Don't you worry. Just you do what old Aunt Elviry tells you." The small woman had fished a fresh apron, a pencil and the back of an envelope out [illegible]

"It may be the best way to bring them," suggested Hemingway.

But the soup, the fish, had been eaten, the salad and now the dessert and coffee, and still no word. Miss Norton was becoming seriously worried when the splash of oars announced an arrival. However, the boat contained only one man.

"Telegram for Miss Norton," he called.

Hemingway watched the girl as she tore open the envelope. At her exclamation he started forward.

"Is anything wrong?" he demanded sharply.

"The—the automobile has broken down," answered the girl mechanically. This was worse than anything that had happened yet. "They cannot get against her arm and the fanciful lines of Bessie Chandler recurred to her:

Oh, the fate of a man is past discerning!
Little did Jacqueminot suppose
At Austerlitz, or at Moscow's burning,
His fame would rest in the heart of a rose.

The dinner in the cozy dining room, aglow with the softly tinted lights from Etruscan electroliers, went off delightfully. Victor Ray beamed his approval. He had not imagined that this beloved young sister of his could attend so satisfactorily to things, especially with one maid ill and the other a derelict. And Edward Carden, brown, rugged, keen of glance—a man whose name was known for scholarship and brilliance on two continents—appeared to find in his girlish hostess much grace and charm.

And Isola Ray was charmed by this stalwart friend of her brother's. He had seen so much of the world. He had seen so many much frequented—and little frequented places. Without arrogance or ostentation, he talked about his travels.

She, in the softness of black lawns and laces, her hair shining like burnished gold and her sea blue eyes sparkling, listened to the tales told as perchance Desdemona listened—long ago.

She was recalled to herself quickly by the action of the Japanese lad who had been hired to wait on the table. He had given a slight start and was staring at the door through which he had just come. Isola turned hastily and glanced in that direction also. A little red, eager countenance was visible. Anxious to see that her carefully prepared dinner was being properly served, Mrs. Devlin was peering in at the door. But Edward Carden had also caught sight of her.

"Aunt Elvira!" he cried, and sprang to his feet. "Why—Aunt Elvira!"

Then he was across the room and had her by the shoulders, and was cordially shaking her. She was laughing like a child with pleasure.

"I didn't know it was you was coming, sonsie. I never knowed it was you!"

"I did not know you were acquainted with Mr. Carden!" cried Isola in amazement.

"I minded him when he was little, honey—same as I did you."

"Tell him," laughed the girl, "that you cooked this dinner; I could no more do so than I could fly to Mars. If you had not come to my rescue"—

She made an expressive little gesture of despair.

Victor's gay voice rang out. "It was a rattling good dinner, all right! Suppose we finish it?"

And when he had gone upstairs to reply to a telephone ring it was just a few lines of a familiar poem that brought the rosy tide back to a girl's delicate face.

"I rather agree with Mrs. Browning," declared Edward Carden. And he quoted softly:

"A housemaid or cook
One may hire with but little to pay,
But a woman's heart and a woman's life
Are not to be won that way."

Elvira heard—through the pantry window. She wiped her kind old eyes on her apron. "God bless 'em!" she said, while Funny purred acquiescence over her saucer of milk.

Animal Appetites.

The dog, the bear and the monkey eat the greatest variety of food. The dog is so thoroughly the companion of man that, while he has preferences, he will eat almost anything that his master eats and therefore may be said to be as omniverous as man. On a level with the dog and possibly surpassing him in this regard, the bear subsists on a very varied diet. The ursida, or bear tribe, appears to be capable of sustaining existence upon a purely animal or purely vegetable diet or to be carnivorous or vegetarian at will. They will contentedly feed and thrive on fruit, honey, nuts, snails, roots and other similar articles of diet and rarely attack the higher animals except when driven by privation. The grizzly bear and the polar bear are great flesh eaters, but in summer the former feeds largely on acorns, and the latter eats grass greedily. Their teeth, like those of human beings, are suitable for a mixed diet. Then have the sharp cutting or pointed tooth of the carnivora and the flat, grinding tooth of the herbivora.

Willing to Compromise.

The mother had been having a strenuous day with her offspring, as Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer tells the story of a little cousin of hers. The small boy had even more than usually been a peripatetic interrogation point. There were few things concerning the construction of the world and all things in it, with asides upon various theological, philosophical and scientific questions, which the mother had not tried to answer. She was exhausted and welcomed the night as she undressed her little son and prepared him for bed. But he had not finished his questions.

"Mamma," he asked, "where is my soul?"

"Now, dear," replied the weary mamma, "I am very tired, and I can't answer another question tonight."

"Well, then, you needn't answer it tonight," said the child, "but please put your finger on the very spot!"—New York Times.

Washington, June 12.—Mrs. Fanny Lomax, familiarly known as "Aunt Fanny," died at her home in Rosslyn, Va., near this city, aged 105 years. Mrs. Lomax was a celebrated negro character. She was born in January, 1801, and up to the time of her death recalled with remarkable vividness the early history of this country. Her oldest child [illegible] of 84 years. She has [illegible] grandchildren [illegible]

Nature has just one pigment on her palette with which she produces all the marvelous tints of beauty, and that one pigment is the blood. The shell-like pink beneath the finger nails, the delicate rose of the cheek, the cherry ripens of the lips, the irridescent brilliance of the eyes are all produced by the blood. Just as the permanence of a beautiful painting will depend upon the purity of the colors with which it is painted, so the peamanence of beauty depends on the purity of the blood. Paint, powder, and cosmetics won't avail to preserve beauty. Beauty begins in the blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a true beautifier, because it provides for nature that pure blood with which alone she can paint. The use of this medicine will cleanse the skin, heighten the complexion, brighten the eyes, and give to face and form that radiance of health which is the greatest charm of beauty. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are very effective in ridding the system of clogging residum, which accumulate with constipated habits.

A COIN OF COURTESY

THE GUINEA OF THE ENGLISHMAN IS NOT A COIN AT ALL.

As a Piece of Real Money It Has No Existence, and It Is Used Only In Imagination as a Rather Awkward Standard of Monetary Value.

Of all the obstacles that confront the Englishman the guinea is the most amazing. The other day an American guest inquired of me, "What is a guinea?" He had been asked for one by a circulating library. It seems an easy question to answer, but as I had been puzzling over the division of an imaginary guinea into four parts the explanation took time. It was as difficult as explaining cricket to a German—in German.

"Show me one," said the American.

I confessed that I did not possess one.

"What, not $5.25?"

"Yes, but not a guinea. We don't have a guinea in England any more."

"But you talk in guineas!"

"That's our fun," I replied lamely.

Nevertheless there is something to be said for our system. Indeed, one might argue that this incessant obstacle race over the multiplication tables that we have to enter insures a bracing of the muscles. We are always kept on the alert to fathom the relations between a pottle, a perch and a guinea or some such absurd and fortuitous combination. And one may suspect that this tightening and strengthening of the muscles in the obstacle race is really the source of England's greatness.

For all practical purposes the guinea—in which we talk—is the most preposterously absurd coin in the world, for it does not exist—corporeally. Some few honest citizens wear spade guineas on their watch chains. But if they tried to pass them over to the booking clerk on the underground railway they would be in danger of the judgment. There are no guineas in England. Yes, in imagination they exist.

And never more accuse yourself of belonging to an unimaginative nation of shopkeepers! The guinea is the coin of courtesy, just because it is not a coin at all. And its preservation as an anomaly is a curious proof of the innate courtesy of the Englishman, who will face any arithmetical inconvenience rather than put a slur on a friend.

This you may see from the lists of subscriptions for the gentleman in distress. You cannot offer him the necessaries of life. When the friend falls by the wayside it must be guineas, not sovereigns, that you supply, and one feels glad that the remarks of the meanest sport that exists—the sport of kings—offers prizes in "sovs." It is merely the analogue of that convention which regulates gifts between equals.

Etiquette forbids your sending a friend a leg of mutton—that is, a sovereign, the ordinary, humdrum coin. But you may send him pheasants, oysters, grouse or salmon, more especially if the salmon is the victim of your own "rode, pole and perch." Possibly the real explanation is that, as a matter of courtesy, you may not give a man what he could obtain at the nearest shop—it must be something that is not easily obtainable.

Now, a guinea is not easily obtainable, and the difference between offering a man a guinea and offering him a sovereign is the difference between sending a man a leg of mutton and sending him a barrel of oysters. That little silly shilling stuck on to the sovereign, that retention of the ghost of a coin long dead and borne on a watch chain with the locket containing a twist of great-great-auntie's hair, was its significance.

It is the embodiment of the Englishman's innate idealism. It is like the equally silly "Esq." which we tack on the names of friends. There are no esquires nowadays and no guineas, but we see them with the eye of faith. And we sacrifice to our faith considerable muscular exertion, many blobs of ink and sundry shillings that might otherwise stock our houses with cheap reprints of the world's best books.

You will naturally conclude that I did not put this view before my American friend. He would scarcely understand it. I led him gently to the palatial bank premises into which I hurriedly cast my weekly wage for fear I should lose it on the way home and pointed out to him (lowering my voice discreetly, as becomes the suppliant in the temple of wealth).

"Note that young man," I said. "He is adding up three columns of figures. There are guineas, things that won't fraternize with half crowns or four shilling pieces or florins or half sovereigns or sovereigns, but you will perceive that this young man is taking them in his stride. Now, what about his muscles?"

"I should conclude," said the American guest thoughtfully, "that a young man who can put 12 guineas together and make 'em dollars can do anything."

"The guinea," I explained as we went out into Piccadilly, "is the source of England's greatness." And the American guest remained thoughtful. —London Chronicle.

Kind of Him.

"No, dear," said he, "I don't intend to have you do your own work after we are married."

"Is that so, dear?" she cooed.

"Yes," he went on. "I have just been looking up your business affairs and I find that you are perfectly able to keep a hired girl."—Detroit Free Press.

How to Polish Damp Shoes.

Damp shoes are very difficult to polish. Try putting a drop or two of paraffin to the blacking, and you will find they polish up at once.

LIGHT TEST FOR GEMS.

How to Prove Genuineness of Precious Stones.

"It has frequently been asserted," says J. A. Key, a jeweler, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "that there are certain kinds of artifically made gems—in fact, I believe the statement has been made to cover all kinds of such stones—that it is not only impossible, practically, for the layman to detect them, but that even experts are often deceived. This is a mistake, however, for by the simple light test any gem except a pearl may be proved false or real by the variest tyro at such an undertaking.

"I assume that the light test as regards diamonds is comparatively well known, and this is the same test that may be applied to emeralds, rubies and so forth. It consists of holding the gem directly on a horizontal line between the eye and a light held at a distance of about a foot from the stone, and preferably this light should be a candle. In the case of a diamond but one light will be seen clearly through the stone, whereas if it is bogus, no matter how much expert care may have been bestowed upon its making, a hundred lights may be observed, none of them clearly defined.

"With other gems the best method of making them is by superimposing a top cutting of garnet on a base, often mere colored glass. When it is held between the light and the eye, therefore, this line of juncture, impossible of detection under ordinary circumstances, will appear like a black line. That's just how simple it is to detect fake stones of any kind except pearls, and with these I confess it is hard to make a detection without tests that are not convenient for the layman to undertake. As a rule, however, a pearl of generous proportions and exceptionally good color is always open to suspicion."

How to Wash Blue Flannel Dresses.

The little blue flannel dresses that are so serviceable and that are a part of the wardrobe of every small girl may be washed satisfactorily if these directions are followed, says the New York Mail:

Boil a quarter of a pound of yellow soap in three quarts of water, slicing the soap into thin shavings and letting it boil until it is all dissolved. Fill a tub with lukewarm water and add enough of the hot soapsuds to make a good lather. Dip the dress in and rub it well, but do not rub any soap on it, for it will leave a white mark. Wring it out with the hands, not with a wringer, because it creases it badly. Wash in another water with a little more of the soapsuds if it is much soiled. Then wring it again and dip into lukewarm water to rinse it, and make it very blue with the blue bag. Shake it out thoroughly after wringing it and dry in the shade until damp enough to iron on the wrong side. It must not be dried entirely before it is ironed. Colored woolen or cotton stockings can be washed in the same way and rinsed in strong salt and water to keep the colors from running instead of blue water.

How to Starch Thin Waists.

In these days of thin shirt waists and delicate neckwear it is sometimes a problem for the housewife to know just how to treat the waists and laces so that they will not be too stiff, says the Philadelphia Press. The following rule is an excellent one: Dissolve a tablespoonful of gum arabic in about three quarts of water and dip the articles to be starched into this liquid. Wring them out and dry them where they will not freeze. After drying sprinkle them, roll them up and iron as usual. The gum arabic will not stick to the iron, and it gives to the muslins and lawns only the same amount of stiffness that is found in new goods. Once tried you will not use starch in your delicate fabrics again. The gum arabic can be bought for 35 cents per pound and much cheaper at the wholesale druggists. An inferior grade is as good for this purpose as a high priced quality.

How to Destroy Moths.

There is a better insurance against moths than the ordinary moth balls or gum camphor, says Good Housekeeping. Put into the bottom of the trunk in which clothes are packed away a small bottle of chloroform, say an ounce or two, according to size of case. Split the cork slightly, so that the chloroform can gradually evaporate. The fumes will kill not only moths, but many disease germs. It would be an exaggeration to say that the gas will kill all bacteria as well as insects, but certainly it is more efficacious than ordinary camphor. Of course care must be taken not to inhale the fumes when opening the chest.

How to Fill a Fountain Pen.

If you use one of the little glass and rubber fillers, be careful to use it slowly both in taking ink from the bottle and in putting it into the pen so as to avoid the air bubbles which hinder the smooth flow of the ink when writing, says Tom Watson's Magazine. If the bubbles form in spite of you, take the slightly unraveled end of a piece of brown twine or splintered end of a broken match and push it into the bubbles until they disappear.

Octopus and Conger Eel.

Conger eels hunt for the octopus and when found, proceed to browse on its limbs. The octopus tries to hug the slippery, slimy conger tight, but in vain, and, finding its limbs growing less, discharges its ink in the face of the foe and, under cover of the turbid water, beats a hasty retreat. It is to escape the too pressing attention of its foes that the octopus possesses the power of changing its color to correspond with that of its surroundings.

PREVENTION OF FIRES.

How Common Sense Rules Would Save Your Property.

It is an old maxim that fire is a good servant, but a hard master. Shakespeare wrote, "A little fire is quickly trodden out, which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench." Fires are the results of accident, of spontaneous combustion and of design. If they have been accidental the cause can generally be discovered, and it will be found they might have been prevented. If the following precautions are taken fires from accident or spontaneous combustion will seldom occur:

Keep your house, store or factory clean.

Never allow rubbish, such as paper, rags, cobwebs, old clothing, boxes, etc., to accumulate in closets and unused rooms.

Never keep gasoline or benzine about the premises.

Never fill your coal oil lamps after dark or near an open fire.

Never run your stove pipes through a wooden partition or through the roof without proper protection.

Never allow your furnace, steam or hot water pipes to come in contact with wood.

Never put up gas brackets so they can be swung against the wooden window casings or against or immediately under curtains.

Never put ashes in a wooden receptacle in or about your premises.

Never keep matches in any but metal or earthen safes, and when you light one never throw it on the floor.

Never allow smoking in proximity to inflammable merchandise or materials.

Never take an open light to examine a gas meter or into a closet.

Never read in bed by candle or lamp light.

Never close up your place of business without going over the entire premises to see that all fires and lights are safe or extinguished.

Never forget that carelessness and negligence are the cause of over two-thirds of all fires.

Never forget to have pails or buckets and water near at hand for immediate use in case of emergency.

How to Put a Patch on a Tire.

It is highly important, of course, that when a patch is to be put on a tire it shall be done in the best style. It is equally important at times to remove a patch, and then the better the work was done in the first place the harder it will be to undo it. One of the best agents to use for this purpose is an ordinary flatiron. It should be heated through, but should not be made too hot, and the best way to get the proper temperature is to immerse it for a time in boiling water. This will not make the iron so hot that it will injure the tire and, after it has been placed upon a patch for a few minutes, the cement will soften nicely. When this domestic appliance is not at hand a good substitute may be found in a clean hammer head, which may be heated by placing it for a time on the exhaust pipe or the cylinder head. Care should be taken not to have the metal too hot, and in the use of a flatiron the best results—the safest, that is—may be obtained by holding the iron close to the patch, but not actually in contact with it.

How to Make a Complexion Soap.

An ideal soap for the complexion is made by taking oatmeal, castile soap and carbolic acid, says the Boston Herald. The oatmeal should be boiled until it has the consistency of thick jelly, then the castile soap should be shaved fine and reduced to a paste with the addition of a little water, after which the two must be mixed together in proportion of two parts castile to one part oatmeal. A vigorous stirring is then given the mixture, and during the process a small quantity of peroxide of hydrogen or diluted carbolic acid is added, a teaspoonful to each quart of the mixture. The soap should then be allowed to cool and when hard may be cut up into cakes of the size most preferred. Oblong pieces about an inch long and wide by half an inch thick will be found more convenient than any other size.

How to Use Eggs For Dysentery.

The egg is considered the best of remedies for dysentery, says Health. Beaten up slightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends by its emollient qualities to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines and by forming a transient coating on these organs enables nature to resume her healthful sway over a diseased body. Two or at most three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases, and since egg is not merely medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise and the quieter the patient is kept the more certain and rapid the recovery.

How to Make Tea Punch.

For a tea punch take one quart of good tea made to the proportion of four teaspoonfuls of good tea to one quart of boiling water, five tablespoonfuls clear lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls juice from tart oranges, two scant cupfuls granulated sugar and one pint apollinaris water. Stir the lemon and orange juice together and put them into a punch bowl with the tea, the apollinaris and a couple of large pieces of ice. If possible add a handful of fresh raspberries, but if these are not at hand use in their place an equal quantity of pineapple dice.

The Modern Way.

"My dear, you must really take Freddy in hand about the way he uses slang. Today he asked me what entomology was, and I told him the science of bugs."

"Well?"

"Then he asked me if an entomologist was a crazy man."—Baltimore American.

FOUND GUILTY BY A JURY!

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy.

THIS ON FOUR COUNTS

Charge Was That of Granting Concessions to Packers for Export Trade

THE JURY WAS OUT HALF AN HOUR

Kansas City, June 14.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway company Wednesday was found guilty by a jury in the United States district court on four counts of granting concessions on packing house shipments for export to the Armour Packing company, Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co., and the Nelson Morris Packing company. The conviction carries with it a fine of from $1,000 to $2,000 on each count. Judge Smith McPherson deferred sentence until June 22.

All four counts are practically the same. The case of the Armour Packing company, on which instructions were read to the jury, charged specifically that the Burlington railway on August 17, 1905, accepted a shipment of oleo oil from Kansas City to Liverpool at a rate that included a rate of 23 cents a hundred pounds from the Mississippi river to New York, whereas the regular tariff rate at that time was 35 cents.

To simplify the case A. S. Van Valkenburgh, United States districts attorney, and George O. M. Spencer, of St. Joseph, representing the defendant company, signed an agreement of facts which was in effect that the Burlington road did contract with the packers to carry their product at 23 cents for the distance named, or a rate of 49 cents for the whole distance from Kansas City to Liverpool. Half a dozen witnesses gave technical testimony pertaining to the tariffs in existence at the time covered in the indictment.

O. M. Spencer, in his argument for the defendant, contended that the Burlington railway had a joint rate under its contract with the Clover Leaf and the Lehigh Valley railroads to carry the packing house products at a rate which would have been valid under the present ruling of the court had it been published. Hence the only crime committed, if any, was the failing to publish the tariff under the contract. The evidence showed, he said, that the shipment was a through shipment to a foreign destination.

The indictment, he said, is the result of a controversy with the Lehigh Valley railway in its keeping its portion of this contract, and when it was unable to sustain itself it resorted to the government and lugged the Burlington into court as a criminal. There should, he contended, be interference by the government in such controversies.

District Attorney A. S. Van Valkenburgh, arguing for the government, said that it was a plain case of violation of the Elkins act.

The jury was out only thirty-five minutes.

Renovo Ex-Burgess Ill.

Ex-Burgess Geo. W. Myers of Renovo is suffering from blood poisoning. Some time ago, says the News, Mr. Myers while cutting a corn on his toe with a razor, accidently inflicted a gash in the flesh, which caused him considerable trouble. A physician was applied to and the proper remedies were at once administered, but the wound continued to grow troublesome until at length blood poisoning has resulted. His many friends earnestly hope for his speedy recovery.

A Forward Movement.

Readers of The Daily News will not consider it an insincere or meaningless utterance for me to say that there is no place on my field of labor in Northern Central Pennsylvania where I find more pleasure in helping a little for a nearer approach to "thy kingdom come" than in Bellefonte where it is our privilege to have an earthly home.

No one will blame me in the execise of a fearless endeavor for the removal of any thing that hinders the coming of the millenium when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

Our Safeguard Temperance movement is in this line of service, encouraging all of our boys and young men to form and follow habits that will surely further their success in life. Leaflets and blank cards are freely furnished. A certificate of Decision is presented to all who fill out the cards, as directed, and return them to their S. S. Superintendents.

Parents and teachers need no exhortation to encourage this undertaking for the highest welfare of their sons and pupils. God with us, there can be no failure but good and desirable results to follow for the present life as well as for the life everlasting.

Rick White Girl Wed to Coal Black Negro

Indignation has been aroused in Canonsburg, Pa., over the marriage of Gains Patman, a coal black negro, and Miss Frances Leonard, a handsome young white woman, who, in addition to being refined and well educated, is wealthy.

The pair were married last Monday by the Rev. Henry Norton, pastor of the First Baptist church of Canonsburg at his home.

Miss Leonard's infatuation for the negro, whom she has known for many years, was discovered by her mother some months ago. The girl's mother had a great influence over her, and succeeded in delaying the mateh, although she could not break off the girl's infatuation, and she secretly met the negro at all times.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Leonard died, leaving all of her money to her daughter, who is an only child.

Both Patman and Miss Leonard are of age.

The girl and her black husband have left Canonsburg and it is said they are going abroad.

"A SQUARE DEAL."

How President Roosevelt's Motto is Illustrated by Pepsikola.

C. M. Parrish says Pepsikola Tablets is the best possible illustration of what our strenuous President means by a square deal. This remarkable remedy is sold to everybody with the express agreement that if it does not do exactly as represented the buyer's money will be cheerfully refunded. They are guaranteed to quickly relieve and permanently cure all stomach troubles, tone up the whole system, give new life and vigor, better courage, more vitality, and bring the weak, weary and despondent back to joyous health.

If they do not cure you of heartburn, sour stomach, loss o' appetite, dizziness, headache, lassitude, and all other unpleasant conditions arising from indigestion, all you have to do is to step into Mr. Parrish's Drug Store and he will pay your money back.

The price is only 25c if they cure. If they fail the cost is nothing. But they won't fail. Mr. Parrish will tell you that dozens of people you know have been benefitted and cured of indigestion and dyspepsia by Pepsikola Tablets, and they will give you a "square deal." No cure, no pay.

READ AND YOU WILL LEARN

That the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice endorse and recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, liver complaint, torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung diseases (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not so good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering, or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hare, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., late of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. —Kentuckians are this week celebrating "Home Week." I may not be generally known that the birthplace of one of Kentucky's greatest historical characters Daniel Boone, is in Pennsylvania. The house in which Boone was born in 1733, stands in Berks county, twelve miles from Reading. It is a substantial old stone house. Boone is not the only person that first saw the light there, for in this same house, Mrs. Bennett, the wife of Dr. John Bennett, of Tyrone, was born. Her father, Dr. Percival Tyron, at one time owned the farm, and during his occupancy, he improved the historic house considerably.

TRAGEDY ON BRITISH SHIP!

Explosion on Haverford at Liverpool, England

FLAMES SOON FOLLOWED

Nine Persons Known to be Killed and Fully Two Score Were Injured.

THE CAUSE IS A DEEP MYSTERY

Liverpool, June 15.—Nine men were killed and about forty were wounded as the result of a terrible explosion on the British steamer Haverford, of the International Navigation company.

Officers were not aware that the cargo of the Haverford contained any explosive which could have caused the disaster. It has been suggested that the explosion was caused by an infernal machine, or by explosives which were shipped as other goods.

Some of the experts of the company hold to the theory that the explosion was caused by the fumes from naptha soap in the cargo being ignited by a spark from a match lighted by some laborer.

The vessel, which is commanded by Captain Nielsen, arrived here Thursday from Philadelphia, June 2, landed her passengers and proceeded to Huskisson dock in order to unload.

The stevedores were in the act of loosening the steamer's hatches when suddenly a most violent explosion occurred. It blew off the hatches, rent the decks and hurled dead and wounded men in all directions. Several bodies were dismembered and the deck resembled the floor of a charnel house.

The disaster was attended by an outbreak of fire. The cargo, consisting of linseed oil cake, in hold No. 2 and hold No. 3, was soon blazing fiercely.

Firemen and police hurried to the spot and the injured were quickly taken to a neighboring hospital while the work of searching for further possible casualties proceeded with vigor in spite of the fierceness of the fire, which soon assumed alarming proportions, owing to the inflammable nature of the cargo. After two hours hard fight, however, the firemen obtained the mastery of the flames.

It is believed that a number of the men taken to the hospital will succumb to their injuries.

The report that the explosion was due to an infernal machine arose from the finding of a wooden box a foot square in one of the holds. This box, which was only partly shattered, still contained pieces of steel machinery. It was prominently marked "For Manchester, England."

The officials of the International Navigation company have taken charge of the box, but they do not attach importance to the theory of foul play, and say that the presence of the box in the hold was a mere accident.

Outwardly little harm has been done to the vessel beyond the rents in the deck, but inside the damage is extensive by the explosion and the fire.

Manager Willett, of the International line, after making an examination of the holds, accompanied by an analytical chemist, said that at present it was impossible to state definitely the cause of the catastrophe.

The holds will be kept just as they were left after the explosion until the arrival of an inspector of explosives from the home office, when a thorough expert investigation will be made and it is hoped to determine the cause of the explosion. The inspector is expected here from London tomorrow.

Several of the victims of the disaster are unrecognizable. One body was found headless and armless and in another case the head was picked up, but the body had disappeared.

Was 105 Years Old.

Washington, June 12.—Mrs. Fanny Lomax, familiarly known as "Aunt Fanny," died at her home in Rosslyn, Va., near this city, aged 105 years. Mrs. Lomax was a celebrated negro character. She was born in January, 1801, and up to the time of her death recalled with remarkable vividness the early history of the country. Her oldest child, is still living at the age of 84 years, and she had 58 grandchildren.

Farmer, Entangled in Electrical Coil, Sizzles.

Clayton L. Nissley, a former poor director of East Donegal, Lancaster county, attempted, with a rake, to push aside a broken electric light wire, so he could drive into the field where he was planting tobacco. The wire twisted toward him, and he tried to keep it away with his hand. As he touched it it rendered him unconscious.

A nephew working nearby witnessed the accident, and with great difficulty released his uncle from the grip of the heavily charged wire. Nissley's hand and were badly burned, and he is in a serious condition from the shock.

—Joseph Ceaders may be a first-class baker, when it comes to a horse deal he is not in it. Seems kind of a "sticker" to Joe. There will be the usual amusements, the usual music and dancing, the usual edibles and refreshments and the usual big crowd. Of course you all will want to reserve the Fourth for the Undines at Hecla park.

—Two hundred and fifty members and friends of the Young Men's Christian Association and Woman's Christian Temperance Union, greeted Prof. Geo. Kiernan in Petrikin Hall Friday evening! The Professor's recital of The Old Homestead together with the impersonation of the seventeen characters of this play, was high class in every respect. Five selections were well rendered by the Bellefonte Junior Orchestra, whose members are as follows: Miss Bertha Detrick, piano; Horace Hartranft and Carl Detrick, violins; and Henry Dickenson, clarionet. That these young musicians have an excellent future before them it is safe to predict. This recital and entertainment was made complementary by the Y. M. C. A., by means of a small revenue from a previous entertainment, which had been held for some time with a membership supper in view. It seemed impossible to carry out the supper plan this spring, so the entertainment was considered as a substitute.

W. Anstadt, of Hollidaysburg, is president of the organization, and is now engaged in arranging a program of exercises for the day.

Locusts are Eating the Chestnut Buds.

Union county's chestnut crop is threatened with total failure unless the birds, which this year have manifested an unusual appetite, vanquish the 17-year-old locusts, which swarm all over the country.

C. K. Sober's grove near Lewisburg, which is noted for the remarkable size of the nuts, is stripped now and aside from failure this year. Mr. Sober says his crops for the next four years will be injured.

Professor Nelson F. Davis, zoologist of Bucknell university, is making a study of the pest, which abounds on the university campus.

The insects come out of the ground for their destroying work after dark. They gather in clusters, as many as 100 being observed on a bush less than a foot high.

That they have not done worse to the college trees, Professor Davis explains, is that they are eaten by English sparrows, flickers, robins and many other birds. The birds snatch the insects before the eggs are laid.

Many species of birds are in the fight against the locusts. Aside from all the domestic fowls, who get within striking distance, flickers, red-headed and downey woodpeckers, blue birds, robins, catbirds, orioles, meadow larks, scarlet tanagers, pheasants, quail, vireos, buntings, thrushes and sparrow hawks all spend their spare time trying to exterminate the insects by devouring them. This list is given by Dr. B. H. Warren, dairy and food commissioner and former state zoologist.

DEATH BY DROWNING.

Two Minutes Under Water Sufficient to Cause Fatal Results.

Drowning is a quicker death than most people suppose. Insensibility is said to begin in about one minute, and fatal unconsciousness generally supervenes in the neighborhood of two. Even practiced divers cannot remain under water more than a minute and a half, and it is almost fatal to remain beneath the surface longer than that.

At Navarino, where there are many expert divers who plunge into the sea after sponges, not one was found who could remain under water for two minutes. In the Red sea the Arab divers generally remain down one and a quarter minutes, while at Ceylon the pearl fishers can seldom stay below for even one minute. There is a case on record at Falmouth, England, where a diver had descended eighty feet and on giving the signal was drawn up slowly, so it was two minutes before he reached the surface. Blood ran from his ears and nose, and he was insensible. He died without speaking.

Insensibility, however, does not always involve death, for in many cases a person may be resuscitated by the use of energetic measures. The bringing to of people who have been under water for five consecutive minutes, however, is considered doubtful by physicians. There have been extraordinary cases related, nevertheless, where persons have been brought back to life after having been submerged for fifteen or twenty minutes, but it is probable that they have come to the surface again and again during that time.—Blackwood's.

SAINT OF THE COOKS.

A Queen of the Culinary Art Who Lived In Genoa.

Santa Zita, as the patron saint of the cooks is named, lived, it appears, at Genoa and was there canonized. She could, so runs the legend, cook better than any chef within 300 miles of the town, which, we all know, is noted for its wonderful soups and dumplings, though of course in the latter indigestible article of food outrivaled by Vienna, since it is one of the chief articles in the religion of gastronomy that it is only in the kaiserstadt that the "glose" is in perfection. Santa Zita was, it seems, not less famous for her piety than for cooking and was a constant attendant at the cathedral during high mass.

One day, however, she fell into a trance, so called—though, in plain English, a good, sound sleep—and quite forgot that she had to produce an exceptionally fine dinner for a large company. On awakening she hurried forth from the sacred edifice in a way which was far indeed from her wont, but on reaching the kitchen what was her surprise and delight to find a party of cherub celestials busy cooking the required dinner. She did not interfere, but was at first not unwilling to accept the praise which was lavished on her culinary success. She soon repented, however, and told the world the truth about the spiritual and miraculous help she had received, and it was agreed on all sides that she deserved to be canonized. Accordingly she became Santa Zita.—London Queen.

Chemical Changes.

By taking some limewater and blowing one's breath into it a fine white powder will be formed in the water.

By adding some common salt to a solution of nitrate of silver a thick white powder is produced which, if placed in the sunlight, will turn brown.

Pour the juice of a red cabbage into a test tube or thin glass bottle, drop in very gradually a solution of washing soda, shaking the bottle every time you put the washing soda in, and you will see the red solution gradually turning blue. Go on adding the soda solution, and the blue color will give way to green.

Repressed Sentiments.

People who marry always hear good wishes, congratulations and other pleasant remarks, but they miss much in not hearing the repressed sentiments which burst forth to others. A woman who recently received a wedding announcement from a friend was heard to exclaim in tones of disgust, "What a willful disregard of the manifestation of Providence when she was so plainly intended for an old maid!"

The Evidence Was All In.

A juryman went to sleep during the closing speech of one of the counsel in the case in an English court. The judge had him awakened and sternly rebuked him. "My lord," said the juror, "I was under the impression that I was swern to give a verdict according to the evidence, not according to the speeches."

Children's Day Services.

The Baptist Sunday School at Martha held their annual children's day service last Sunday evening. The neat and commodious church was filled to its utmost capacity. The decorations were tasty and beautiful. The service was entitled, "Songs of Summer," and for its excellent rendition much credit is due G. Earnest Ardery and his able corps of assistants, J. R. Williams, Mrs. O. D. Eberts, and Miss Mattie Steele. The service was without question the best ever given in this community and its rendition was almost perfect. The program consisted of recitations, exercises, solos, duetts, choruses, etc. Every participant did exceptionally well. The emblematic piece, "The Ship of Faith Homeward Bound", was impressively given by several young ladies and seven young men. A large ship with sails set and colors flying was on the platform and made the teaching quite realistic. Miss Lola Williams presided at the organ and led the large choir of singers. The entire audience was held enraptured from beginning to end.
